 That is not happening.

Spreading the word about Suburban Express and holding them accountable for their questionable actions is more important than trying to remove a page designed to harass me. I'll find something better to do with my time when Suburban Express follows the example of Peoria Charter and acts like a respectable company that doesn't constantly get into trouble with customers.

Besides, Suburban is probably going to keep that page about me up even if I stop talking about them.

 He lost a significant cybersquatting lawsuit in the 1990s against Panavision.

<http://www.finnegan.com/Panavision-Intl-LP-v-Toeppen-01-01-1998/>

Also, he admits on his website that he is a cybersquatter. Here is a direct quote from his website:

"In 1995, I registered about 200 domain names. Some were generic English words, like hydrogen.com. Others corresponded with trademarks that were shared by more than one company, like americanstandard.com. And some corresponded with trademarked coined words, like panavision.com. It was clear to me at the time that domain names were valuable, undeveloped virtual real estate. There was absolutely no statutory or case law regarding trademarks in the context of Internet domain names at the time. It seemed to be an excellent opportunity to do the virtual equivalent of buying up property around a factory -- eventually the factory owner would realize that he needed the scarce resource which I possessed.

I sat on my virtual real estate and waited for offers (and threats). Many even-tempered folks purchased domain names and went on their way. Others sued me. I litigated two domain names because I wanted to determine if a domain name holder is legally bound to turn over a domain to a trademark holder.

Unfortunately, Federal Courts sided with trademark holders in Intermatic and Panavision. Rather than accepting my real estate analogy, the courts likened my actions to taking a lollipop from a defenseless toddler. Shortly after the courts ruled against me, I abandoned all domain registrations corresponding with trademarks."

More lawsuits filed by Suburban Express by AlmostGrad100 in UIUC

 [-] Gulugawa 16 points 11 days ago

Wow, it seems like filing lawsuits is becoming a regular activity for Suburban Express. It also seems like they are trying to have as many lawsuits as possible filed over the summer when students are not in Champaign to defend themselves. These lawsuits need to end now.

These are my suggestions for spreading the word about Suburban Express.

- Create a website to help students find alternative transportation, and explain why Suburban Express is not a good company. I own boycottsuburbanbus.com, and it would be great to have help developing it beyond a simple WordPress site.
- Distribue flyers around campus this summer. Most of the incoming freshman come to campus over the summer to sign up for classes, so this is a great opportunity to spread the word to them.
- Put anti-Suburban Express flyers in student mailboxes.
- Have students stand wait at Suburban Express stops and hand out anti-Suburban Express flyers.

 I don't think he is going to be locked out of most good engineering and tech jobs.

Nevertheless, as /u/thatoneguy211, this does have the potential to ruin his career. Many companies have issues with large number of applications, and unflattering material about a person online provides them with a good excuse to reject him.

- The account is less than 1 hour old, and Suburban Express has a history of creating new accounts here.

Alternatively, there is a small chance that the account is from another troll.

 /u/ohjesuswhatcrap is probably from Suburban Express.

- The post is harassing OP, and attempting to make fun of Redditors, which is something Suburban Express has a pattern of doing.
- The account is less than 1 hour old, and Suburban Express has a history of creating new accounts here.

Alternatively, there is a small chance that the account is from another troll.

I got it based on my GPA and the difficulty of the classes I took in high school and my extracurricular activities did not matter much.

However, I'm not sure about the stats needed to get it, and it got the scholarship 4 years ago, so things probably changed. I would assume that it has become harder to get because of the University's financial issues.

Need to get my wisdom teeth removed - can anybody recommend a local dentist they've had a good experience with?

[-] Gulugawa 2 points 1 month ago

Exactly.....

I am currently trying to find a job for next year, and the page Suburban Express created about me is not helping. I looked at the link /u/offbyoneerror posted, and it doesn't seem like I can request that Google removes the page because it is protected under free speech. My best shot at removing the page appears to be reducing Suburban Express's customer base, so less people visit their website, which would decrease the search ranking of that page.

Suburban Express Downsizing?? by NeverGonnaGrad100 in UIUC

[-] Gulugawa 5 points 1 month ago*

/u/NeverGonnaGrad100 is probably from Suburban Express. The username is mocking the same user on this subreddit that Suburban Express has a history of harassing. Also, I doubt that someone not from Suburban Express would find this eBay listing by themselves.

I'm hoping this sale indicates that Suburban Express is losing business. They deserve it after everything they have done, including the 10 lawsuits they filed this month against passengers. Check out this discussion about a recent lawsuit filed by them:

If anyone wants to create the "trip planner", I own boycottsuburbanbus.com.

Currently, I have a basic Wordpress site, and I'm hoping that someone can help with the design and development of the website. The hosting is already paid for. Promoting the website would be difficult as /u/stauroza said. I had a lot of trouble promoting my website, especially since it focused on explaining why Suburban Express was bad instead of explaining alternative options.

Suburban Express trying to intimidate me with a lawsuit by uttaresh in UIUC

[-] Gulugawa 9 points 1 month ago*

Don't let Suburban Express intimidate you. Part of the reason for their continued success is their ability to intimate critics with lawsuits or harassment.

Suburban Express offers a better variety of bus timings and stop locations in the Chicago area than competing companies such as Peoria Charter. This has allowed the company to survive for far more time than it has deserved. Nevertheless, they are slowly losing customers as more people become aware of their business practices. It just might be months to years before they finally fade into obscurity.

I think there needs to be an organized campaign to spread awareness around campus with actions such as creating posters and educating incoming freshman. We want the majority of incoming freshman to not ride Suburban Express.

Edit: I just noticed that Suburban Express just sued 10 more people. If you go here, and do a search in the small claims section with the name "Suburban Express", you can find 10 lawsuits from this month.

Many people on /r/uiuc is trying to encourage people to boycott Suburban Express, not give them free publicity.

Here is why Suburban Express deserved to be boycotted.

- Suburban Express actively harasses critics. The lead moderator of /r/uiuc was threatened with a lawsuit twice due to his criticism of Suburban Express. I started criticizing Suburban Express after hearing about this, and now they created a page about me.
- The owner of Suburban Express was permanently blocked from Wikipedia for harassment and using sockpuppet accounts to make edits.
- They have filed over 150 lawsuits since the beginning of last year, including around 20 in February.

In terms of absolute difficulty, it is one of the hardest classes in the CS department. However, I believe that CS majors have more difficulty with lower level classes such as 225 because they don't have as much CS experience before taking them.

I have been losing interest in playing most video games over the past few years since I started playing board games.

I noticed that board game offer more opportunities for social interaction and it is easier to convince friends to play video games instead of board games.

New FOIA request filed by owner of Suburban Express by AlmostGrad100 in UIUC

↑ [-] Gulugawa 4 points 3 months ago

↓ Dennis has been the president of Suburban Express since it was founded in the early 1980s. Over the past few years, he has been suing students for online criticism or violating arbitrary rules that the company made up.

He has also done much more in addition to suing students.

- Dennis created pages about me and several other people who have criticized Suburban Express in an attempt to make us look bad.
- He has a history of getting into trouble on Wikipedia. One of his accounts was banned because he use it to make edits without disclosing a conflict of interest. In November, he was permanently blocked from Wikipedia for harassing another editor.
- He is a notorious cybersquatter. His legal battle with Panavision over the rights to Panavision.com was a famous cybersquatting case and a significant motivation in the creation of laws against cybersquatting.

While most people who ride Suburban Express will have a decent experience, a significant number of people will have to deal with the owner charging arbitrary fees and filing a lawsuit against you. Also, the owner engages an other questionable practices such as harassing critics and astroturfing on Wikipedia.

People should be giving their money to transportation companies that don't engage in such questionable practices.

↑ [-] Gulugawa 2 points 4 months ago

↓ I doubt we will know the answer for a while as it depends on what happens with Net Neutrality over the next few years. Despite the recent court ruling and the lack of action by the FCC, Net Neutrality is not over.

ISPs already appear to be interfering with video streaming from YouTube and Netflix, so any other sites with video streaming will have issues as well assuming something isn't done to fix net neutrality soon. Young startups also will have serious issues without net neutrality because of their inability to pay for better service.

It depends on how comfortable you are with programming. If you did well on the MPs, but didn't do well on the tests, you should be fine, but the class will be challenging. I had 5 years of programming experience, and I still found CS 225 to be a challenging course because of the MPs and not knowing how pointers worked.

If you had trouble with the MPs and concepts such as recursion, drop 225, and wait until you have more programming experience.

He has created pages on the Suburban Express website targeting me, a couple other redditors, a Wikipedia administrator, and a UIUC employee. He has also been permanently blocked from Wikipedia for harassment.

By riding Suburban Express, you are giving money to the owner that he does not deserve. Nevertheless, Suburban Express would be a good bus company if it was under the influence of another owner.

↓ They have sued over 100 students for "violating" their terms of service and have been making it very difficult for them to defend themselves.

The owner of Suburban Express, Dennis Toeppen regularly harasses critics. Here are some examples.

- He threatened a lawsuit against a /r/uiuc moderator twice who was criticizing Suburban Express.
- He has pages on his website about people who say negative things about Suburban Express.
- He got permanently blocked from Wikipedia for harassing an editor. He has also gotten in trouble with Wikipedia for making edits using sockpuppet accounts.
- He is probably responsible for a large portion of the throwaways on /r/uiuc used for trolling and harassment.

↓ Peoria Charter offers good service and competitive prices to the places it directly goes to such as the Chicago airports.

Also, while Suburban Express might be the cheapest option for many people, there have been a large number of students that had to pay over $50 for a ticket.

 The problem is that for many students, it is significantly cheaper and/or less time consuming for them to use Suburban Express. They should not be taking advantage of this in order to offer substandard service.

Nevertheless, yelling at the bus driver and calling the police was a serious overreaction.

/r/UIUC news: Suburban Express PR guy posts trash about a rival company, gets fed a bowl of dicks by throwaway75369 in UIUC

[-] Gulugawa 10 points 6 months ago

I do as well. In the past two months, I have been targeted by numerous throwaways, had a Suburban Express page created about me, and had someone likely affiliated with Suburban Express place posters about me in several buildings. I can't wait for the day that Suburban Express goes out of business or the authorities finally hold Dennis accountable for his actions.

We are losing the moral high ground with excessive insults against Dennis. One of the problems with Dennis are his repeated attempts to insult people on this subreddit. There are plenty of legitimate reasons to criticize him that do not involve insults.

The problem is that Suburban Express offers a better variety of times and has direct service to certain Chicago suburbs that other bus companies lack. I have heard many students say that they dislike Suburban Express and its business practices, but they feel that Suburban Express is the best option for the reasons I mentioned.

Nevertheless, we need to have an organized student boycott of Suburban Express and spread the word about alternative bus companies.

I agree that a student run grassroots movement is necessary to deal with Suburban Express before memories of this year's controversy die down and they take advantage of incoming freshman who have not heard much about them. The administration does not appear to be taking meaningful action against Suburban Express.

I agree that companies taking advantage of transient individuals is a huge problem across the US.

However, Suburban Express probably has a large amount of cash from their side business of speculating on domain names, even if they are not making much money from their bus service.

Dennis Toeppen didn't see a conflict of interest in trying to be on the Board of Trustees of CUMTD. by DaggerChelsea in UIUC

[-] Gulugawa 22 points 7 months ago

He frequently posts Suburban Express ads on CUMTD buses and could have abused his position to have cheaper ads. CUMTD also owns Illinois Terminal, so Dennis could have also used his power to restrict competing bus companies from using Illinois Terminal.

Also, he filed a lawsuit against CUMTD in 2003. http://www.dailyillini.com/news/local/article_43a45b74-ae1a-11e2-9a0d-0019bb30f31a.html

Our best bet is to ignore him so his extremist views stop getting attention.

Suburban Express also has a history of harassing people online with actions such as creating Reddit

[-] Gulugawa 9 points 9 months ago

The Qing dynasty had collapsed by the early 1900s after a successful rebellion which ended imperial rule in China.

At the time of the Japanese invasion, Nationalists and Communists were the two dominant powers and neither of them had any association with the previous imperial government.

Don't worry about difficulty as grades are normalized across sections. On the other hand, having a good moderator is really important. When I took the class last year, many of the moderators were apathetic and did not have a strong understanding of the material.

I would talk to students who have taken the course last semester as I am not familiar with the quality of any of the current moderators.

Peoria Charter is a better option if you are travelling from the airport. I have been using regularly since the beginning of last year without any issued.

Illini Shuttle is owned by Suburban Express, which is having issues with bad reviews and the fact that they sue customers. Read the note at the top of the subreddit or the following article for more information.

↓ Agreed, I would check out the Illini Roleplaying network if you are interested in tabletop RPGs. At the beginning of every semester, they run a gaming convention called Metacon, which is a great way to be introduced to the club.

If you are interested in board games, the club has Game Nights on Saturday evenings at 7pm in the English building.

↓ There is a student fee that is used to fund the Daily Illini and they also get a decent amount of funding from other sources. Getting funding is important, but they need to make sure that they do not compromise their beliefs to do so.

I'm disappointed with them because the Daily Illini was strongly against Suburban Express earlier this year and was trying to encourage people to not ride them.

- Scala has significantly less boilerplate code than Java due to features such as type inference. For example, declaring an immutable point class in Scala simply involves typing in the following line:

`class Point(val x:Int, val y:Int)`. Doing the same thing in Java would take a minimum of 6 lines of code.

- Scala's support for functional programming and use of first-class functions is really useful. `val res=numbers.foldRight(0)((a,b) => a + b)`, while doing the same in Java would require a for loop.
- Scala can use any existing Java library without any extra configuration. For example, the code add all the elements of list in Scala is:

The problem with Scala is that it can be very confusing due to the fact that there are often multiple ways of doing something. In that case, Python is a better choice.

I think higher education is really important as young people as it gives people the opportunity to learn more about important topics such as dinosaurs and the art of throwing snowballs. Colleges do a great job of educating people by giving students more creative freedom and removing pointless requirements that interfere with learning such as mandatory class attendance and excessive homework.

Many people in Soviet occupied areas as Ukraine initially viewed the Germans as liberators because they hated Stalin. Germany would have benefited greatly if they had taken advantage of this.

Also, the Soviet manpower advantage was not very significant due to the fact that a large portion of the Soviet Union's population was occupied by Germany and the fact that the Red Army took significantly more casualties.

The real turning point was when Hitler decided to declare war on the US. Britain could not do much against Germany without outside help.

The significant reduction in boilerplate and useful features such as support for functional programming make me wonder why I waited so long to learn Scala.

TL;DR: Java needs to fade into obscurity. Scala is a better version of Java.

↓ The savings will not be as much as you think. You said in your previous post that you were a University Achievement Scholar and you will lose the $12,000 per year that you get from it if you move in-state.

Also, you will have difficulty claiming in-state tuition if your parents are paying at least part of your tuition unless one of them lives in Illinois.

This is a problem, but not feeding trolls is difficult. For example, one of the subreddits I'm subscribed to has had a serious problems with trolls for the past few months. Accusing new users of making throwaways needs to stop. Over the past few months, someone has been trolling this subreddit with throwaways. The troll is probably looking to cause some sort of disruption on this subreddit, so are playing into his hands by making unsubstantiated claims about new accounts.

The OP is probably a user new to Reddit.

Suburban Express court date to vacate dismissals with prejudice to enable 20+ lawsuits to be reinstated: July 30th 1:30pm Ford County Courthouse by Oh-Yes-He-Did in UIUC

↑ [-] Gulugawa 4 points 10 months ago

↓ U of I should care about Suburban Express and attempt to take action against them. Despite a large amount of bad publicity, the "free market" has not done its job by putting them out of business. I'm staying in Urbana for the summer and I frequently see Suburban Express buses.

- Suburban Express has posted fliers in classrooms which is against U of I policy.
- They have filed frivolous lawsuits against many students and other transportation companies such as Peoria Charter and Amtrak.
- Suburban Express lawsuits often force students to get distracted from their studies to fight the lawsuits or find a way to pay the money when they can barely afford tuition.
- They have wasted U of I resources by attempting to file a FOIA request for a redditor that they were harassing.

Also, they had an exclusive deal with Greyhound to provide transportation to students in the 1980s and took action against other privately held companies by attempting to prevent them from providing competition.

Posts by /u/wang-banger on /r/politics. The posts themselves were annoying enough. However, the main problem was that his posts constantly made the front page.

Thankfully, r/politics is no longer a default subreddit.

Linux is not very hard to install and makes it difficult for inexperienced users to mess things up.

Installing Linux simply involves placing a CD/DVD in your computer and restarting it. The main challenge is finding a good Linux distro and getting it onto a CD/DVD.

Yeah, I've heard that people have been spending a lot more effort trying to train their kids to get into TJ. As a TJ alum, I believe that if you aren't able to get without preparing, then you should not be able to attend. I attended TJ from 2006 to 2010 and a significant portion of the students did not enjoy being there. However, this was balanced out by the number of people who were truly interested in science or technology.

I recently heard about this and it saddens me. What makes it even worse is the fact that one of the people who works for them also teaches at TJ. <http://www.mytjprep.com/about-us>

As much as I dislike the modern GOP, saying that they have not come up with any good ideas is taking it too far. For example, several GOP members such as Rand Paul are pushing for non-interventionist policies.

Before you criticize the modern GOP, take a look at many of the comments on this subreddit. I sometimes feel that I'm reading a liberal version of Fox News.

↑ [-] Gulugawa 2 points 10 months ago

↓ Two superpowers are capable of having an antagonistic relationship and still be a peace with each other. Russia and the US never directly fought during the Cold War. With the current interdependence of the world economy and threat of nuclear war, a future conflict between two powers will not get worse than a 2nd Cold War.

permalink context full comments \(507\)

Reddit, what do you think is most likely to trigger World War III? by phattykins in AskReddit

↑ [-] Gulugawa 2 points 10 months ago

↓ I doubt the war will be started by a currently established country. Even the apparently "crazy" leaders such as Kim Jong un know that attempting to start WWIII is a bad idea. Conflicts such as the civil war in Syria will remain localized with major powers attempting to gain influence by fighting proxy wars.

It is also nearly impossible for non-state entities to start WWIII, so I would not expect someone such as Mohammed Morsi to start WWIII.

There are a large number of terrorist groups such as Al-Qaeda who have shown a strong dislike for Western governments combined with a willingness to use suicidal tactics. As a result, the only way I see WWIII possibly happening is if one of these groups takes control of an established state such as Syria or Afghanistan.

Taxi drivers and drivers of other public vehicles such as trains.

Self-driving cars will see widespread use within the next decade and will not require a human operator. Many airports and public transit systems already have self-driving vehicles that run with minimal supervision.

Bus company attempts to sue r/uiuc moderator again. Ken "Popehat" White offers his assistance. by Gulugawa in SubredditDrama

↑ [-] ↓ Gulugawa [S] 12 points 11 months ago*
The drama started when Dennis Toeppen(owner of bus company) attempted to sue the moderator of r/uiuc for posting a banner on the subreddit warning people to stay away from his bus company. Many people already disliked the company based on complaints such as rude staff, bad customer service and insulting customers. The banner was put up because of those facts and because r/uiuc found out that Dennis was suing customers.

Aside from suing him, he has done the following.

*Attempted to get personal information about redditor from the University of Illinois. *He has sued at least 100 people for questionable reasons such as "bad conduct", accidentally giving the wrong ticket, or posting bad reviews. *He had the court proceedings take place in a city not easily accessible to the people getting sued. *He has repeatedly posted on Reddit using sockpuppet accounts. Many of them were created to impersonate or mess with other redditors. *He has insulted several of his customers on his website. *In the 1990s, he was a professional cybersquatter.

Ken Popehat's blog post(thanks for reminding me u/HelpfulLurker)

His actions seem like a way to get attention, mess with people and provoke people into doing things he can legitimately sue for. Too bad he seems to be forgetting that his actions will eventually cause his company to loose customers and go bankrupt.

 Dennis has repeatedly attempted to fan flames on this subreddit with throwaway accounts that are designed to impersonate and harass people, so he would qualify as a troll.

There are plenty of legitimate reasons to dislike him, and we are playing into his hands in the likely case that he is a professional troll.

 At this point, I think Dennis is a professional troll like Fred Phelps or Anne Coulter who is trying to get attention by doing and saying things that people strongly disagree with. I thought Dennis would come to his senses by now and at least act like he has learned his lesson instead of acting like a professional troll. This and attempting to ask UIUC for confidential information about the r/UIUC moderator has convinced me otherwise.

It would be best if we focused on organizing boycotts, helping out people being affected by Dennis and see if there is a way to file harassment claims against him.

Also an arranged marriage usually does not involve two people being forced to marry. It generally involves the parents or other adults introducing two people to each other followed by a marriage after a short period of time if both people agree.

 I don't think he is a troll as trolls typically do stuff to get attention or create controversy. Dennis is trying to promote Suburban Express with his actions on Wikipedia and he trying to prevent people from saying bad things about them. His attempts to publicly shame people who are "bad" customers probably represents an imbalanced emotional response.

Dictators throughout history have also attempted to go too far in suppressing dissent and frequently attempt to publicly shame people. Often when they are challenged, they become more aggressive in suppressing dissent and denouncing their enemies and normally do not attempt to reform their behavior. For example, Assad has been responding to people challenging him over the past two years by using the Syrian army to crack down on dissent and put people in jail. Also, he frequently emphasizes the fact that his enemies are terrorists. He has not "learned" his lesson either.

What do you think is the biggest mistake made by a single human in the history of the world? by thejokeisonus in AskReddit

↑ [-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago

↓ Invading Russia was not a mistake. Stalin had plans to attack Germany, and Russia had natural resources such as oil and grain that Germany needed.

The Russian army was in a really weak state after the purges in the 1930s and was not prepared to fight a major war. When they attacked Finland in 1939, it took them 4 months to win and suffered 5x the casualties despite having a significant numerical advantage. Also many people living in the Soviet Union strongly disliked Stalin and initially viewed the Germans as liberators. Hitler could have welcomed these people as allies so that he would have millions of Soviets willing to fight him instead of focusing too much on the racial superiority of Aryans.

Russia was dangerously close to losing and only survived because of a bunch of poor strategic decisions that Hitler made in addition to an abnormally cold winter and a non-aggression pact with Japan. In late 1941, the Russian army had lost millions of men and was practically out of reserves. At the end of 1941, around 75 million people from the Soviet Union were under German occupation in addition to a large amount of natural resources and other Soviet assets. The population of the Soviet Union was around 200 million, so that meant that the Soviet Union effectively had around 125 million people available to fight. Germany had a population of around 80 million people at that time, so their manpower deficit was not too significant, especially when you consider the fact that the Russians lost significantly more troops than the Germans, even during the later years of the war.

Hitler split the German army into 3 groups for Barbarossa and wasted a large amount of time shuffling troops between the 3 groups, which caused him to fail to take strategic targets such as Moscow and Leningrad. To make things worse, he decided to declare war on the US in December 1941, which meant that he had to divert crucial resources away from fighting Russia. He continued to make poor decisions throughout the war such as refusing to allow troops in Stalingrad to attempt a breakout after they were surrounded.

 People frequently flip out even when they are treated with respect. For example, Dennis often responds to constructive criticism of Suburban Express by aggressively trying to take action against the person who criticized it.

 His mindset probably has a strong resemblance to those of dictators. Dictators through history have also been given multiple opportunities to respond positively to criticism, but they often squander them.

 Many people started complaining about Suburban Express after many of their bad business practices not related to enforcing rules became well-known. Attempting to file lawsuits in another county or publicly criticizing people such as Chris are not related to enforcing their rules.

 I don't think he is a troll as trolls typically do stuff to get attention or create controversy. Dennis is trying to promote Suburban Express with his actions on Wikipedia and he trying to prevent people from saying bad things about them. His attempts to publicly shame people who are "bad" customers probably represents an imbalanced emotional response.

Dictators throughout history have also attempted to go too far in suppressing dissent and frequently attempt to publicly shame people. Often when they are challenged, they become more aggressive in suppressing dissent and denouncing their enemies and normally do not attempt to reform their behavior. For example, Assad has been responding to people challenging him over the past two years by using the Syrian army to crack down on dissent and put people in jail. Also, he frequently emphasizes the fact that his enemies are terrorists. He has not "learned" his lesson either.

What do you think is the biggest mistake made by a single human in the history of the world? by thejokeisonus in AskReddit

↑ [-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago

↓ Invading Russia was not a mistake. Stalin had plans to attack Germany, and Russia had natural resources such as oil and grain that Germany needed.

The Russian army was in a really weak state after the purges in the 1930s and was not prepared to fight a major war. When they attacked Finland in 1939, it took them 4 months to win and suffered 5x the casualties despite having a significant numerical advantage. Also many people living in the Soviet Union strongly disliked Stalin and initially viewed the Germans as liberators. Hitler could have welcomed these people as allies so that he would have millions of Soviets willing to fight him instead of focusing too much on the racial superiority of Aryans.

Russia was dangerously close to losing and only survived because of a bunch of poor strategic decisions that Hitler made in addition to an abnormally cold winter and a non-aggression pact with Japan. In late 1941, the Russian army had lost millions of men and was practically out of reserves. At the end of 1941, around 75 million people from the Soviet Union were under German occupation in addition to a large amount of natural resources and other Soviet assets. The population of the Soviet Union was around 200 million, so that meant that the Soviet Union effectively had around 125 million people available to fight. Germany had a population of around 80 million people at that time, so their manpower deficit was not too significant, especially when you consider the fact that the Russians lost significantly more troops than the Germans, even during the later years of the war.

Hitler split the German army into 3 groups for Barbarossa and wasted a large amount of time shuffling troops between the 3 groups, which caused him to fail to take strategic targets such as Moscow and Leningrad. To make things worse, he decided to declare war on the US in December 1941, which meant that he had to divert crucial resources away from fighting Russia. He continued to make poor decisions throughout the war such as refusing to allow troops in Stalingrad to attempt a breakout after they were surrounded.

I also think there is a good chance that SubEx will not be relevant at all in 4-5 years too because the market can change rapidly. Two years ago, it seemed like LEX was doing well and I did not know about Peroia Charter despite the fact that I was a student here. Now LEX is gone and a large portion of the student body uses Peoria Charter. UIUC students have lost a great deal of respect for SubEx over the past year for their actions and it will be reflected in the bus company they decide to use.

I also felt that the incident about Jeremy Leval wasn't a big deal until SubEx made a huge deal about the incident and ended up suing Leval and a bunch of other people in a place 30 minutes away that was difficult for students to access.

Also, for everyone who is downvoting this, talltroll3

↓ Agreed, I cannot multitask effectively and I doubt many others can as well. I've seen many students and my attempt to use laptops during lecture, which ends up with them browsing the Internet and students without laptops getting distracted by them as well. Professors should not allow laptop use during lecture or make people with laptops sit in the back.

Several months ago, my friend told me about a board game club that had weekly meetings, but I was too focused on classes to consider going.

In January, it was the beginning of a new semester of college, so I decided to try going to the club's meetings. As a result, going to meetings and playing board games became a major part of my weekly routine.

My experiences at the club motivated me to find a hobby that involved designing computer games based on mechanics I learned from board games. I also had problems talking to females before that(I'm a guy), which going to meetings helped me fix.

 If the US got involved, then the war would end up in a stalemate and China would eventually sue for peace. The US can easily take control of the Taiwan Straits with its navy and China would not be able to do anything. However, there would be a severe economic crisis because the US and China would probably cut off trade relations.

There is also a strong chance that the US would not get involved. If that happened, then Chinese victory would be a forgone conclusion if they were willing to put in the effort.

I agree that spending money on athletic programs is not a bad long as it produces results. However, higher salaries for coaches do not always translate into better performance. Illinois is currently paying $1.8 million per year to their football coach despite the fact that he had a 2-10 record last year.

<http://www.fightingillini.com/sports/m-footbl/stats/2012-2013/teamstat.html>

If the administration wants to attract students, then they should spend money on things that produce results such as improving teaching quality or improving the food in the dining halls.

In addition to being a complete PR failure, this game is an example of picking the wrong tool for a job. As a software developer, this thread makes me wonder why large portions of the game code was written in Javascript. Picking a scripting language that has a large performance overhead for an "agent-based simulation" game is a bad idea. They should have gone with a faster language such as C++ so that they could have increased the number of agents in the game.

At least there was some snow. I remember having several snow days for "wintry mixes" which ended up being rain and then having a day off from school for an inch of snow that fell the night before. My favorite moment was reading a Washington Post article in 2004 talking about how "bad" conditions were after <1" of snow fell.

Also, I don't think all the closings were due to people overreacting. For example, several of my teachers in school cited being cautious due to the threat of lawsuits and other issues. Once, a teacher slipped and had to go to the hospital because FCPS did not do anything about the black ice that had formed the night before.

Have these "snow models" EVER WORKED FOR NOVA??!?!?

by [deleted] in nova

[-] Gulugawa 3 points 1 year ago

I also noticed a lack of accuracy in the "snow models" and the fact that they consistently seem to overestimate the amount of frozen precipitation. They have generally been accurate for major storms such as Snowmageedon, but they frequently seem to fail with smaller storms or when temperatures are close to freezing.

I've been in Illinois for the past two years and the "snow models" here are significantly more accurate. However, the precipitation here usually falls as all rain or all snow, so the models don't often have to deal with borderline freezing temperatures.

I agree, TJ was a high stress place when I attended due to the fact that some students and held themselves and others to narrow-minded high standards, especially when with beliefs such as the fact that a B+ was considered failing. For example, many people believed that taking AP Physics as a junior without previous physics experience was a god idea.

During the end of my senior year, I was talking about where I was going to college and my friend asked in a condescending manner: "Why would you want to go there?" when I was going a top-ranked engineering college.

I hope the administration is taking steps to change things.

The horror anecdotes are probably from juniors without previous physics experience. I took AP Physics with Dr. Dell 3 years ago and many of the juniors in the class frequently talked about the difficulty of the course. Also, Dr. Dell gave boring lectures and his extra credit consisted of giving physics problems during lunch. However, his grading was not too hard and he made interesting jokes.

 [-] Gulugawa 2 points 1 year ago What is going on?

When I took Algebra 2 6 years ago, the average grade was somewhere around a B+/A-. Math teachers at TJ recognized the intelligence of TJ students and realized that most of them deserved at least a B. I find it surprising that that the average skills of TJ students have declined so rapidly/the teachers suddenly got more strict with grading.

 [-] Gulugawa 2 points 1 year ago Wow, this is sad. People who lack basic math skills should not be applying to TJ, especially with the difficulty of the math and physics classes here.

On the other hand, when I attended TJ from 2006-2010, there was also an issue with the administration attempting to have really high standards. For example, they encouraged many juniors to take AP Physics C without any previous physics experience. Many students succeeded to their intelligence and work ethic, but most of them would've been better off taking AP Physics after having a background in physics due to the way people learn. Also, all juniors were encouraged to take AP US History to the point where the administration had trouble finding enough students to take the regular version of the course.

 [-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago I went to TJ from 2006 to 2010 and it was a great experience with the a few exceptions. Most of the people there are great, and being able to get involved in hands-on projects with the tech labs was fun.

Going to TJ will help you significantly in college admissions as long as you aren't applying to popular East Coast schools and or several other elite schools. I got rejected from UVA, but I ended up with a generous merit scholarship to a top-ranked engineering school despite the fact that I was a below average student at TJ with respect to GPA and SAT score.

The STEM classes at TJ are excellent preparation for college. I'm majoring in computer science right now, and the programming courses I took at TJ made things significantly easier for me. Also, many college courses are significantly easier than their TJ equivalent. My Chemistry class was supposed to be on the level of AP Chemistry, but almost all of the material was stuff I learned in my non-AP Chemistry class.

What stereotypes have you found to be true, more often than not? by Giinto in AskReddit

↑ [-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago

↓ As a student a university with a large number of Koreans, I can confirm that most of them only talk to other Koreans. However, I feel like they do that because they are not used to American culture and feel comfortable talking to other Koreans. If I went to a university in Korea, I probably would spend most of my time interacting with other Americans.

[-] Gulugawa 1 point 1 year ago

Many people here do not have a lot of money and many of them are on student loans. As a result, they should not be forced to pay additional fees, especially if there are having difficulty paying for tuition. If they want to implement a mandatory fee, it should only be for people who have extra money to spend.

If the Student Government needs money, I will gladly donate at least $10 if they give me an easy way ↓ Threats like this are making me increasingly convinced that maintaining the status quo with North Korea is a bad idea. Our best option involves finding some way to work with China and South Korea to prepare for a North Korean collapse and cut off their supplies.

The cost of dealing with North Korea is going to keep on rising as they develop more advanced weapons. Also, their government is unlikely to collapse in the near if we continue our current policy of dealing with them.

Virginia gov would really like everyone to stop talking about GOP's sneak redistricting now by Gates9 in politics

↑ [-] Gulugawa 17 points 1 year ago

↓ As someone who is from Northern Virginia, I agree. One of the few areas where Virginia has been having success is the economy and that is only due to massive federal spending that is directly creating jobs. In areas such as transportation and women's rights, they have been a complete failure.

Virginia gov would really like everyone to stop talking about GOP's sneak redistricting now by Gates9 in politics

↑ [-] Gulugawa 8 points 1 year ago

↓ Based on his abysmal record as governor, I don't see him having a legitimate reason to not block the GOP's redistricting plan.

As someone who has lived in Northern Virginia, I agree that our government has been a failure. The main reason why our economy has been doing well over the past decade is all the jobs that the US government has created in the area.

We have the worst traffic in the nation and McDonnell has not done a good job of fixing the problem. For example, one day last summer, it took me 30 more minutes than normal to get home from work because I took a wrong turn and got stuck in traffic. One of McDonnell's "solutions" is to implement a regressive sales tax when there are a bunch of upper middle class and rich people who can easily afford to pay more. Him and the rest of the government were also responsible for the "solution" of creating premium toll lanes which require installing a device on your car that could be potentially used to track you. His only achievement was to help start the construction of a new Metro line which should have been constructed several decades ago.

TL;DR McDonnell has been a failure as Virginia's governor and should not be trusted to have a legitimate reason to not block the GOP's redistricting plan.

two randomly selected questions to write about. If you didn't prepare for the essays beforehand, it was nearly impossible to write a good essay in the time that you were given. Also, the grading was really harsh and I got a bunch of 6s and 7s on my ID terms despite the fact that I correctly identified them. People disliked the course to the point where there was a Facebook group I created called "Rage Against the Hist 141" with at least half of the student in the class as members. Unfortunately, I made the group secret after one of the TA's attempted to join and I left the group, so I'm not sure if there is a way to find the group again.

↓ The experts do not agree that Obama's plan is better than Romney's. In the Economist article 45% of the academics identified were Democrats and only 7% were identifies as Republicans. When the article took an roughly equal sample of Democrats and Republicans, the overall reception to Obama's plan was not as favorable.

Romney's economic plan is not viable and there are plenty of legitimate sources that discredit it.

Senate Republicans block bill that would penalize outsourcing, reward insourcing by CaptainJackKevorkian in politics

[-] Gulugawa 0 points 1 year ago

Our infrastructure is in need of some serious investment right now. We do not need to be giving more tax cuts to corporations when corporate profits are at record highs.

Infrastructure in the US is in serious need of some investment right now. For example, India currently has significant problems with traffic and producing electricity which is partially due to a lack of infrastructure investment. In addition to temporarily creating jobs, infrastructure improvements will significantly benefit the US in the long term.

You are right that this bill would create jobs and stimulate the economy. However, investments in infrastructure or a tax cut for middle class Americans would be better.

It is a good thing that they Republicans blocked this bill. With this bill, we will basically be playing a negative sum game where we will gain jobs at the expense of other countries while our tax revenue goes down. If other countries attempt to give tax breaks, the results will be even worse. If the Democrats want to create jobs, they should spend the money on something more useful such paying

There are plenty of other useful bills that the Republicans have blocked, we should focus on those.

 I'm the current president and one of the founding members of the Illini Chess Club. Here is my advice.

- Find 4 other members and register your club ASAP, it will be significantly harder to recruit members if you wait until the school year starts.
- Try to get a booth for Quad Day, it will help significantly with recruiting. We did not start the Illini Chess Club until the school year started. As a result we had issues with recruitment because we missed Quad Day *Create a website for your club and host it on your NetFiles account here: <https://netfiles.uiuc.edu>. Your club does not have to be registered to do this and you do not need programming experience.

 Take the credit for Physics 212. I decided to take Physics 212 for the "easy" A despite the fact that I had AP credit. I ended up spending 8 hours a week despite the fact that I didn't do anything beyond what was required. I haven't taken Physics 211, but it appears to have a similar workload. There are more productive ways to spend your time that do not involve spending 8 hours a week for an "easy" A.

Reddit, what's your worst memory of a "I wish I hadn't done that" moment? by Dumbone in AskReddit

↓ While people should be earning more than the minimum wage, a minimum wage salary is enough to afford an apartment. At that salary, a person working 40 hours a week for 52 weeks earns $15,000 per year.

In Urbana, Illinois, which is a small city 2 hours south of Chicago, most apartments have a rent of far less than $1000 per year with utilities included. Many of my friends pay less than $500/month for rent and still get decent apartments. Your only other major expenses will be food, clothing, and insurance; having a car is not necessary here.

If you are looking for a more social/party dorm, you should sign up for one of the Ikenberry dorms. However, you will be far away from your classes.
2. Your adviser will be able to help you with signing up for classes. I suggest not repeating classes that you got credit from high school unless the concepts are important for future classes. Since you are a CS major, none of your AP credits correspond to classes you will need in CS. However, based on your situation, you should take CS 125 and CS 173 during your first semester.

time retaking courses. Instead, use the extra time to take additional CS courses or start a personal project. Employers will be far more impressed by knowledge of CS and personal projects than they will be by retaking classes for an easy A. If you get a job, make sure it is in something related to CS, this will greatly help you when you are searching for an internship.

5. CS focuses more on programming and theory, and ECE focuses more on hardware. Currently, more companies are looking for CS majors than ECE majors, which currently works in your favor.
6. Avoid private loans unless you are only taking them out in small amounts. Private loan companies are very unforgiving and will force you to pay money without any regard to personal hardships that you may face. If you can't find a way to pay for UIUC without taking out private loans, you should go to a community college for a year. Even UIUC is not worth taking out large private loans.

 I think most of the Republicans are smart enough to realize the damage they are doing to the economy. Republicans such as Ron Paul who care about the economy and want to cut education spending are a small minority.

IS CS 231/232 hard? by HURRRDURRRRRHNNNG in UIUC

[-] Gulugawa 3 points 2 years ago

I took 231 with Garzaran and I am currently taking 232 with Zilles. There are two lecture sections and Garzan and Zilles are the professors.

Garzaran is an awful teacher, you will learn more by reading the lecture notes than you will in her lectures. Zilles is far better and the quality of his lectures makes it worth attending them at 9am. Despite the fact that the material in CS 232 is hard and the material in CS 231 is easy, I found CS 231 to be a hard class due to the fact that listening to Garzaran's lectures is just as bad as skipping class. There is a strong possibility that each professor will teach a lecture section, so the difficulty of the course will be based on who is your lecturer. I would strongly suggest not signing up for another class between 9 and 11am so you will be able to go to the lecture section that Zilles is teaching.

tl;dr CS 233 is being taught by one of the worst professors in the CS department and one of the best CS professors, the difficulty will be based on which one is giving the lectures.

As a college student, my social life has improved since I got rid of my Facebook since I communicate with many of my friends in real-life instead of on Facebook. For keeping in touch with friends outside college, gmail is a far better, because it allows you to do more than send plain text messages and it has a better chat system.

I became an Eagle Scout in 2010 and my troop leader specifically said that saying you are atheist or gay at a board of review would automatically cause you to fail and not get Eagle Scout. Our troop was located near Washington DC, but many of the adult leaders were from military families, which probably had a significant effect on the attitudes in my troop. We basically had a "Don't Ask, Don't Tell Policy". I feel that there can be valid reasons why gay people cannot be in Boy Scouts, but having to believe in a god is completely ridiculous. However, despite the flaws of the BSA, Boy Scouts is a great way for kids to meet new friends and learn leadership skills.

The goal of a prison should be to house prisoners and rehabilitate people so that they are able to lead a crime-free life after leaving prison. On the other hand, a for-profit company goal is to maximize profit, which means in the case of prisons that prisoners will be held in poor conditions without attempts at rehabilitation due to the desire to make money.

CS 225 Honors by ganduG in UIUC

↑ [-] Gulugawa 3 points 2 years ago

↓ I took CS 225 honors last semester. Your grade consists of doing 3 C++ programming assignments and applying parallel programming techniques, which I found to be fun. You also have teach two 2 hour review sessions on CS 225 topics with a partner.

I'd say that the review sessions will take up 6-10 hours of time. The programming assignments are not too hard, but you will be screwed if you wait until the last few weeks to start them. I started the assignments 2 weeks before they were due. Due to final exam stress, I made a stupid mistake on the maze generation assignment so that my code created unsolvable mazes and mazes with cycles in addition to many other dumb mistakes.

 The administration's focus on rankings is one of the major flaws at TJ. This can be seen by the administrations insistence on students talking AP US History and AP English and encouraging juniors to sign up for AP Physics C without prior physics experience.

↓ Agreed TJ accepts applications from an area of about 2 million people, and many of the kids who apply have highly educated parents, which helps explain why students are so smart.

Using state standardized tests to rank schools is also bogus. For example, the SOL state tests given in Virginia are pathetic. Teachers at TJ openly make fun of the test and neither them nor the students take the tests seriously.

The focus on using AP tests to rank schools is also bogus. For example, Stuyvesant High School is considered to be one of the best high schools in the nation, but it is ranked #31 because of a policy limiting the number of AP courses students could take. Apparently, students at Stuy can take a limited number of APs, which probably explains their "low" ranking.

Students and faculty at TJ take its #1 ranking really seriously. In my AP Government class, our teacher asked us if we supported US News ranking high schools, everyone except for me raised their hand.

I currently attend UIUC. When I tell my friends that I went to TJ, many of them recognize that US News and World Report ranked my high school #1 and take the ranking too seriously. They do not give puzzled looks like they would give if I went to another magnet school such as Stuyvesant

If you are 100% sure you want to attend UIUC, apply for housing ASAP.

If you are taking AP Calculus, AP Chemistry or AP Physics C, make sure you continue to put effort into those classes to do well on the AP exam. Their corresponding classes at UIUC are difficult and time consuming.

US News and World Report Needs to Stop Ranking High Schools by Gulugawa in nova

[-] Gulugawa [S] 4 points 2 years ago

I think that TJ's administration is obsessed with prestige and things have become worse since US News started ranking us 4 years ago. This can be seen by the efforts of faculty members to increase the number of AP courses taken. When I was a student there, people were practically forced to take AP US History and AP English and the honors level courses for them were not always available. But I think the worst manifestation of the TJ administration's obsession with prestige can be seen by the fact that juniors are encouraged to sign up for AP Physics C when it is a lot wiser to take it senior year after some preparation.

This website for AP Physics C at TJ shows the difficulty of the material and the fact that it is unsuitable for a first-year physics class. One of the most disturbing things I found in the syllabus was the fact that is said that the number of people taking AP Physics as juniors is increasing. When I took AP Physics C as a senior, between 10-20% of juniors were in the course; there are serious problems if that percentage has gone up. Here is the course website: <http://tjphysics.org/>

I believe that the US News ranking of high schools will encourage other high school administrations to become obsessed with prestige.

I went to TJHSST from 2006-2010 and I noticed that TJHSST's #1 ranking encouraged an elitist attitude among students of the school including myself. Our #1 ranking is questionable due to the fact that it is based off of AP scores, which are not the sole indicator of a school's quality.

Same here, I can learn more by reading the lecture slides for 50 minutes than I can listening to Professor Garzaran. I found the material in CS 231 to be easy, but the graders love to arbitrarily take off points. For the decoder question on the first midterm, I got a 0 because I assumed that D3 was the most significant bit instead of D0 despite the fact that my circuit was identical to the solution.

Since you already have programming experience from ECE 190, the only major concept you will learn in CS 125 is object-oriented programming. As a result, I would not recommend spending time taking CS 125.

I would suggest taking CS 125. However, keep in mind that your experience in AP Comp Sci may not be very helpful since you probably took the exam at least 3 years ago.

Do not take CS 225. I am in CS 225, and I initially had a lot of trouble with pointers and memory management despite the fact that I had 5 years of experience programming beforehand in Java. A large portion of the course is spent implementing data structures such as quadtrees and linked lists and it is not easy.

Pulling off an all-nighter does not make you better than other people. Even if you are not doing work at the last minute an all nighter as a terrible idea as you will find it difficult to concentrate the next day. I think it is a better idea to get drunk because you can at least get some sleep after you are done partying and actually be able to focus later the next day.

I'm a CS major taking Hist 141 as a gen ed and it is probably my hardest class. Even though I may spend more time on my technical classes, they are somewhat easier because I know how to study and get good grades in them. In Hist 141, the tests consist of identifying the historical importance of certain terms and writing a historical essay, which are two things that I am not very good at.

I think one of the main reasons that engineers here think so highly of themselves is due to the fact that UIUC is one of the world's top engineering schools. I don't think this is a pattern unique to UIUC. After my high school was ranked by US News, I noticed that a lot of my classmates started thinking really highly of themselves. Nevertheless, the majority of the engineering majors here are really nice, and most of my close friends are in engineering.
